

Greenwich House Malakoff Girls Basketball League

In 1995, when a local parent, Harry Malakoff, couldn't find a basketball league for his then ten-year-old daughter, he along with the Greenwich Village Youth Council, founded the Girls Basketball League. Today, Greenwich House runs this unique league which combines volunteer coaching, mentorship opportunities and strong community and parental support for girls 9 - 16 years of age.

The goals of the program are to give girls a chance to have fun while enhancing self-esteem, teaching one to win and lose gracefully, working well with others and instilling the discipline to faithfully attend practices as well as games. No experience playing is necessary as our volunteer coaches, who have a love for basketball, are hands-on in teaching the fundamentals of the sport. All participants receive a team trophy at the end of the season. Participants also benefit from clinics run by the Columbia Women's Basketball Team.
